

SOME TAKEAWAYS:

There needs to be a forum to bring young people and employers together.

Can we map who does what and share this?

What does help and support look like if it doesn't come from parents?

What is a success and how can it be celebrated? Acknowledging that it will be different for everyone.

How can you identify hard to reach young people and support them?

How can the 'employment' discussion start earlier in school?

Is it the role of the people 'in this room' to broker the relationships between the young people and their voices and the employers and their voices?
